

LET ME IN

"Alien" (Alan Handley)

Many will come, to seek your affections,
To win you over to their side.
With promises empty, and selfish intentions,
They captivate you with their smile.

But here I stand, at the door of your heart
Knocking, won't you let Me come in?
Won't you let Me in?

I can cast out your fears, wipe away all your tears,
Bring a light into the dark.
You can share eternity, together with Me,
If you just, open your heart.

Others aim at your mind, instead of your heart,
Tickle your ears and sound so wise.
Bombarded with lies, and fiery darts,
By wolves who wear a sheep's disguise.

But here I stand, at the door of your heart
Knocking, won't you let Me come in?
Won't you let Me in?

I can cast out your fears, wipe away all your tears,
Bring a light into the dark.
You can share eternity, together with Me,
If you just, open your heart.

But I patiently wait, through all of their noise,
And gently call out with a still small voice.
Your heart is My goal, but I want you to know,
That to answer My call is your choice.

So here I stand, at the door of your heart
Knocking, won't you let Me come in?
Now here I stand, at the door of your heart,
Won't you let Me in?
